TRANSIT: GREENER & HEALTHIER COMMUNITIES

Our federal government is investing $28.7 billion in public transit over 12 years. This includes investments into buses, expanded light rail transit and subway lines across the country, and will help Canadians get around more efficiently and keep the air we breathe cleaner.

The TTC launched into service the first of 60 all-electric buses, called eBuses, on the 35 Jane route. It is one of the largest mini-fleets of electric buses in North America and is a key part of the TTC's plan towards a zero-emission fleet by 2040. This was made possible by $140 million in funding between the federal government and the City of Toronto.

Well-functioning transit systems grow the economy, reduce air pollution, and create inclusive communities. Our public transit investments are, also, an important part of Canada's climate action plan towards the elimination of greenhouse gas emissions.

In Davenport, this translates to the following:

- Additional funding for bike lanes
- Significant increase in Bike Share Toronto stations
- 5 new SmartTrack/GO stops
- Funding to extend the West Toronto Railpath

ANNOUNCING A FEDERAL INVESTMENT OF $1.25 MILLION TOWARD 50 BIKE SHARE TORONTO STATIONS

How can our federal government best help Torontonians get around more efficiently?
